PREFACE

The embarrassment which results from a lack of knowledge of correct spelling is surely the most annoying. Constant use and practice and a never-failing watchfulness and correction make good spellers. No one ever became such by applying the few rules which we have given, but there must be a careful training of the ear as well as the eye to the right formation of the word. Orthography is learned almost altogether by the eye, therefore the teacher's drills in orthography must be of a nature to require the pupil to constantly observe the word forms and print them retentively upon the memory. Correct pronunciation is also an absolute aid to correct orthography, therefore in this work we have given the correct pronunciation and syllabication of each word.

We have endeavored to acquaint the learner with the words which are most essential to a practical education. It embraces about 5,000 words. Special attention is directed to the lessons on business and law, and synonyms and antonyms. There are also lessons devoted to the different occupations, professions, etc., which will be of special interest to all. We believe the book to contain a more exhaustive and a better classified list on these subjects than any other book published, and it cannot fail to be of special help to any student. The definitions are necessarily brief, and even meager in some instances, yet they meet the ordinary requirements.

It is hoped, therefore, that this book, embodying as it does the results of careful study and selection of words and containing all that experience has shown to be necessary, will receive the favor of teachers and students everywhere. We dedicate it to them, believing that it offers a list of studies which is far superior to any of its predecessors.

INTRODUCTION

The following suggestions are offered with the hope that they may lead to a more intelligent and careful study of the lessons.

Webster's International Dictionary has been the standard for pronunciation, syllabication and orthography of this work, although the Century, Standard and other dictionaries have been consulted. Capitals have been used where required, words divided into syllables, and correct pronunciation and accent marked. Compound words are separated by a hyphen. When a word has more than one spelling, the preferable form is given.

The Key to Pronunciation, if carefully studied, will aid the pupil in giving the proper sound and accent to words which are so essential in learning to spell. In fact, correct pronunciation is essential to correct spelling.

The Lessons are arranged as Miscellaneous, Classified, Synonyms and Antonyms, Dictation and Reviews, with several lessons on American and foreign cities. The Classified lessons are distributed throughout the work to relieve the sameness, while the order is all that can be desired. Every fifteenth lesson is a review, but we would suggest that reviews be more frequent at the discretion of the teacher.

The Methods of teaching spelling are many. Some teachers pursue the plan of pronouncing a lesson at random and then require the pupils to study the misspelled words for the next lesson. The author has found the following a good plan: Assign twenty-five words for the succeeding day's work which the pupil is expected to prepare together with the definitions. A careful study of the definitions will help the students to an intelligent comprehension of the words and an enrichment of their vocabulary, as well as giving them a better command of language. After the teacher pronounces the words to be spelled and defined, the pupils are allowed to exchange books and correct each other's work, checking all misspelled words as indicated in the diagram below while the teacher is pronouncing, spelling and defining the words correctly. There are other ways for checking the work, but we believe this is the least burdensome to the teacher. It is sometimes advisable to allow the pupils to take turns in pronouncing, spelling and defining the lessons in making corrections, as this stimulates their interest in the work. Mistakes of every kind should be carefully noted. The lesson fails of its complete purpose unless some method is employed to fix upon the mind of the pupil the correct spelling of the misspelled words. All such should be carefully reviewed at the succeeding lesson. A careful record of each pupil's standing should be kept in a book for this purpose, so that it may be examined when desired.

Spelling Blanks or books prepared for the purpose should be used for all the lessons. The reasons are obvious. Below is given a specimen page of a convenient form, showing a written lesson, corrected.

Some teachers prefer to assign two lessons, pronouncing only twenty-five of the most difficult words. This method may be advisable for advanced classes.

Those who do not care to have pupils learn definitions may use the extra column for the writing of another lesson.

RULES FOR SPELLING

Nearly all rules for spelling have exceptions to them, but the few given here, and in lessons 5 and 29, may be helpful if carefully applied.

1. Monosyllables, and polysyllables accented on the last syllable, ending in a single consonant preceded by a single vowel, double the final consonant on taking another syllable beginning with a vowel; as, bag, baggage; man, manned; fat, fatter; refer, referred, referring; begin, beginning.

2. Words ending in final silent e, except ce or ge, drop the final e when suffixes are added beginning with a vowel; as, hope, hoping; debate, debating; write, writing.

3. Final e is sometimes retained to preserve the identity of a word in pronunciation; as, arrange, arrangement; singe, singeing. Before a suffix beginning with a consonant, final e is also retained; as, spite, spiteful; move, movement.

4. Words ending in y preceded by a consonant, change y into i on taking another syllable beginning with any other letter than i; as, fancy, fanciful; easy, easily; speedy, speedily; deny, denying; busy, busying; signify, signifying.

5. In words like siege, deceive, etc., if the sound is ee; use e after c, and i after other letters; as, receive, believe. Exceptions: neither, sheik, weird, weirs.

6. The plural of nouns ending in o, if the final o is preceded by a vowel, adds s; as, folio, folios. If it is preceded by a consonant, add es; as, hero, heroes; cargo, cargoes. Exceptions: juntos, solos, cantos, duodecimos, octavos, quartos.

7. Nouns ending in y, preceded by a vowel, form their plurals by adding s; as, money, moneys; but if y is preceded by a consonant, it is changed to ies in the plural; as, bounty, bounties.

8. Words of one syllable ending in a consonant, with a single vowel before it, double that consonant in derivatives; as, slip, slipping, etc. But if ending in a consonant, with a double vowel before it, they do not double the consonant in derivatives: as, troop, troopers, etc.

9. Words ending in l, double that letter in the termination ly; as, beautiful, beautifully, etc.

CAPITAL LETTERS

The following rules for the use of capital letters will prove helpful to every writer:

1. Every sentence, or every expression which stands for a sentence, should begin with a capital.

2. Names of persons, including the surname or family name, as well as the baptismal or Christian name, should begin with a capital.

3. Names of places should begin with a capital. If the name consists of more than one word, each word should begin with a capital.

4. Names of nations should begin with a capital. Also words derived from the names of nations; as, Americanize, Roman, etc.

5. Names of rivers, mountains, oceans, etc., should begin with a capital.

6. Names of sects or denominations should begin with a capital. The word "Church," when part of the name, should begin with a capital. When it does not refer to a particular denomination, or when it means a house of worship, it should begin with a small letter.

7. Names of political parties should begin with a capital.

8. Names of associations, fraternities, societies, etc., should begin with a capital. Each word in these titles, as in proper names, comes under the same rule.

9. Names of months, days and festal times should begin with a capital. The names of the seasons, as spring, summer, etc., should not begin with capitals, except where they begin sentences or are personified.

10. Titles of respect or honor, as Mr., Miss, Mrs., Master, Prof., Rev., Dr., Esq., etc., should begin with a capital. When these words are not used as titles or as abbreviations of titles, they should commence with small letters.

11. Titles of books, and all the important words in such titles, should begin with a capital. Titles of essays, or newspaper articles, come under the same rule.

12. Titles of endearment or relationship, when used before the names to which they refer should begin with capitals. When used as introductory in letters, they should begin with capitals.

13. All names of the Deity should begin with capitals. The pronouns which refer to Deity should begin with a capital if there is any possible danger of a misunderstanding of their reference, but not otherwise.

14. All personified words should begin with capitals.

15. The pronoun I and the interjection O should always be capitals, and Oh should always begin with one.

16. All abbreviations, used in place of words which require capitals, should also begin with capitals.

17. In all resolutions the word That, following the word Resolved, should begin with a capital.

18. Every broken line, as in the address and signature of letters, should begin with capitals, as should the chief words of such lines.

19. Every direct quotation should begin with a capital.

20. Every line of poetry should begin with a capital.

SOME MODERN SPELLINGS

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the National Educational Association, held in Washington, D. C., July 7, 1898, the following list of words with simplified spelling was approved, and their use ordered for all the publications of that association. These spellings are in accordance with the rules adopted by the American Philological Association in 1883.

DICTATION EXERCISE

Consult your dictionary for meaning of words.

How beautiful this night! the balmiest[1] sigh,
Which vernal[2] zephyrs[3] breathe[4] in evening's ear,
Were discord to the speaking quietude[5]
That wraps this moveless[6] scene. Heaven's ebon[7] vault,

Studded with stars unutterably[8] bright,
Through which the moon's unclouded[9] grandeur[10] rolls,
Seems like a canopy[11] which love has spread
To curtain her sleeping world. Yon[12] gentle hills,
Robed in a garment of untrodden[13] snow;
Yon darksome[14] rocks, whence icicles[15] depend,
So stainless[16] that their white and glittering[17] spires
Tinge[18] not the moon's pure beam; yon castled steep,
Whose banner hangeth o'er the time-worn[19] tower
So idly that rapt fancy deemeth it
A metaphor[20] of peace;—all form a scene
Where musing[21] solitude[22] might love to lift
Her soul above this sphere[23] of earthliness;[24]
Where silence, undisturbed,[25] might watch alone,
So cold, so bright, so still.

—Percy Bysshe Shelley.

Before honor[1] is humility,[2] and pride goes before a downfall.[3]

Industry[4] and economy,[5] patience[6] and perseverance,[7] are the qualities[8] which insure[9] success.

Honest or courageous[10] people have very little to say about either their courage or honesty. The sun has no need to boast of his brightness, nor the moon of her effulgence.[11]

Great talents[12] for conversation[13] should be attended with great politeness.[14] He who eclipses[15] others owes them great civilities;[16] and whatever a mistaken[17] vanity[18] may tell us, it is better to please in conversation than to shine in it.

"If you ask me," says Zimmerman, "which is the real hereditary[19] sin of human nature, do you imagine[20] I shall answer—pride, or luxury,[21] or ambition,[22] or egotism?[23] No, I shall say indolence. Who conquers[24] indolence[25] will conquer all the rest."

Cover them over with beautiful flowers;
Deck them with garlands,[1] these brothers of ours:
Lying[2] so silent by night and by day,
Sleeping[3] the years of their manhood[4] away,—
Years they had marked[5] for the joys of the brave;
Years they must waste[6] in the sloth[7] of the grave.[8]
All the bright laurels[9] they fought[10] to make bloom[11]
Fell to the earth when they went to the tomb.[12]
Give them the meed[13] they have won[14] in the past;
Give them the honors their merits[15] forecast;[16]
Give them the chaplets[17] they won in the strife;[18]
Give them the laurels[19] they lost with their life.
Cover them over,—yes, cover them over,—
Parent[20] and husband[21] and brother[22] and lover;[23]
Crown in your heart these dead heroes[24] of ours,
And cover them over with beautiful[25] flowers.

LESSON 116

DICTATION EXERCISE

Consult your dictionary for meaning of words.

Testamentary[1] law deals with the will, or testament, by which a man, the testator,[2] or a woman, the testatrix,[3] directs what shall be done with his or her property after death. Real estate given by will is a devise.[4] Personal property so given is a legacy.[5] Those receiving these gifts are devisees,[6] or legatees.[7] Bequests is a general term covering these gifts.

Wills should always be drawn under judicious[8] and experienced[9] advice. Their provisions[10] should, in every case, be so clearly defined that there can be no mistake about the meaning. Any person of proper age and sound judgment[11] may convey property by will. All legatees are debarred[12] by law from witnessing[13] wills in which they are interested; their signature[14] would nullify[15] the whole instrument,[16] and no person can serve[17] as executor if he be under twenty-one years of age, a lunatic,[18] convict, imbecile,[19] or an alien[20] at the time of proving the will. The father may appoint his wife, son, brother, or any other relative as executor, and each in turn may do likewise, as confidence[21] may exist. An addition to the will, called a codicil, designed[22] to modify, add to, or change previous bequests, may be executed at any time, but in every case it must be rendered as definite[23] and precise[24] as the will itself, witnessing included. Wills should be made in good season, while those making them are in health and at leisure.[25]
